Her story

Six months ago I sorted out a lot of old documents – credit card receipts, bank statements, electricity bills, letters, and so on. I put them all in a bag and my husband said he would take it to the recycling centre the next time he was in that part of town. However, he didn't, so in the end I just put the bag out with the rubbish bin.

A few weeks later, when I checked my bank account balance, there was no money left in the account. I went to see the bank manager and he told me that all the money had been withdrawn from cash machines in Australia. I said that I'd never been to Australia, but he showed me the computer records.

Things got worse. The next day my credit card statement arrived. There were several expensive things on it that I hadn't bought. I phoned the credit card company and they said that the things had been bought on the Internet from Australia. They asked me if I had lost my credit card at any time, but I told them that I hadn't. I said I had no idea how anyone had got the details.

Anyway, I told my neighbour about it, and he said that he'd seen someone looking in the rubbish bins a few weeks earlier. Then, of course, I realized. The person had taken the bag with my old documents in it.

It took a long time to sort everything out. The bank was very helpful. I had a meeting with one of their experts on ID theft. She said that it was a very common crime and that people made it so easy for the thieves. She told me that you should always destroy any documents with financial information on – and personal information, too. She said that thieves used personal details, such as your date of birth, your mother's maiden name, children's names and birthdays to work out Personal Identification Numbers (PINs) and passwords.

Now I'm certainly more careful now. You really have to protect your identity.

Choose the correct endings for the sentences.
